Your answers may vary slightly - use your synonyms knowledge to tick similar vocabulary that you may have chosen instead (e.g. excited vs thrilled). The answers given are just examples, so please do not mark it word for word.

Monday

Task 1

The girl has fallen off her scooter. She feels upset because she has hurt her knee, which has a cut on it, whilst falling off.

Task 2

The girl is pleased with her new Christmas present. I know this because she is playing with it, smiling, and not looking to open any other presents.

Task 3

The girl is delighted that she has just won a running race. I know this because the track marks on the grass, finishing tape and her clothing suggest it was a running race. I think she won because she is running through the tape before anyone else, the first-place badge in the photo and her smile shows she's thrilled.

Task 4

The girl is crying because her toy doll has broken, which is making her feel devastated. I know she is extremely upset because of how red her cheeks are and how the large amount of tears streaming down her face.

Tuesday

Task 1

The person is falling over on the slippery ice, which is making them feel afraid and has started to scream. I know this because their mouth is wide open whilst the rest of their body looks like it's falling out of control.

Task 2

I think the boy is Easter egg hunting in the garden because I can see an Easter egg being hidden behind the grass. This, along with using a basket to collect the Easter eggs, shows it is an Easter egg hunt.

Task 3

I think it is Autumn because leaves usually turn brown and fall off the trees during this time. I think the boy is feeling relaxed and joyful whilst kicking the leaves, which could be at the park where there it is likely to have many trees.

Task 4

Yes I think he has because he is wearing appropriate gear, such as wellies and long clothing to keep himself warm and protected from the water and the weather. He also looks in control because he is holding the lead firmly. The boy also looks calm which suggests he is comfortable with what he's doing, making it likely that he has done it before.

Task 5

I think the dog was caught playing with the toilet roll, which created a mess and made the owner cross because they would have to clean it up. The dog is now being told off by the cross owner, so the dog may feel ashamed for upsetting their owner.

Wednesday

These tasks are even more open to interpretation. Answers given are just examples. Check with an adult to see if your answer is coherent and gives reasonable examples.

Task 1

The helicopter may have been called in by people on the boat to help save them from the stormy winds and aggressive waves. The people on the boat might be feeling terrified of sinking, which is why they called the sea rescue helicopter who could help save them.

Task 2

The old, used bench looks like it is in a park because of the grass around it, although the bench and grass around it look worn down and used. The bench may have been used by the same person, or two people for a long time because it has sagged in the middle where they may have sat regularly. Although the wooden seat is sagging, the bench doesn't look dangerous or uncomfortable, as all of the wood is still in place.

Task 3

I think there is a tug of war competition taking place, where the men are heaving the rope as hard as they can to win for their club. I think this because the men are leaning back, pulling the rope and tensing their faces, wanting to win for their club which is shown by their matching uniforms. It is a sunny day, shown by the men wearing sunglasses, t-shirts and shorts.

Thursday

Task 1

I think the two people feel different; the man seems more relaxed because he is leaning back, with a leg up to suggest he is calm and comfortable. Whereas the woman seems more energetic by leaning forward, moving her hands and opening her mouth to say something.

Pupil can decide on woman's feelings - cross, excited, shocked, jiggly - but must provide reason why they think this.

Task 2

1. I think Pip feels hopeful and determined to do well because, even though there were tall buildings, dogs bumping into him and a stern trainer to meet him, he was still smiling and hopeful of succeeding. He showed his hopefulness when raising his ear to pass the test.
2. I think Pip is feeling overwhelmed and disappointed because he is finding the new skills difficult, shown when he overfilled his bowl and made his trainer fall over, who glared at him.
3. I think the trainer now feels proud of Pip because of how much he has improved through spending time together and becoming more friendly with each other. This differs from the first image we see of the trainer who had her hands on her waist and then pointed, to want to appear dominant.
4. I do not think he graduated because he tripped over his trainer and crashed into the judge, which may not have impressed him. We then saw Pip trudging out of the door alone, with the door slammed shut behind him, whilst he drooped his head down low, looked down and made an upset sound to show he was feeling distraught.
